

XMAS LETTER 2024

Hey Neighbor!

As newbies on the block, we're hoping to arrange a playdate for some families but, being a little shy, we don't host block parties and we would NEVER go door to door to meet all of Maple Street. So if you wouldn't mind, we've got a few questions that will help prepare us for the get-together.

When a party host gives you a choice among water, wine, or soda, do you go for the most expensive of the three?

Lets say little Brittany dropped a few f-bombs at school: Do you believe the teachers?

If your son wrote some graphic letters to an elderly neighbor, would you punish him or just say, 'boys will be boys'?

Have you ever borrowed a lawn tool from a neighbor and 'lost track of time'?

Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Kiwanis club?

How many times this year have you rolled through a Stop sign? Are you sure?

If you found $20 on the street while walking the dog yesterday, would you (a) give it to charity, (b) put it in your joint account, or (c) stash it in the sock drawer?

When you're home alone, why do you watch those raunchy DVDs you keep hidden in your formal wear suitbag?

There's no right or wrong, naughty or nice answers...Just a few nuggets to help us mine a beautiful friendship AND foster a genial playdate-to-come! Oh, by the way, what games do your reindeer, uh children play?

Thanks for your cooperation and Happy Holidays!!

The Elfmans

(The family down the block. The ones with the red and white house, snow always on the roof)